

The NZ Company's chief surveyor and second in command of the expedition, Frederick Tuckett, sailed in Will Watch. He was a staunch quaker. Just four months later he formed the committee to name the town's principal streets. In April 1843 as directed, he planned the survey of Wairau which led to the slaughter of 22 Nelson citizens in June 1843.

FIFESHIRE 01-02-1842

On her maiden voyage, Fifeshire carried several notable settlers: John Kerr, farmer, who ploughed the first field in Nelson town, Alfred Saunders, miller. Upon leaving port the Fifeshire ran aground on Arrow Rock on 27th February and in the process breaking her back. It was four years before the remains were removed. Several small ships were constructed from her timbers but no record of them has been found. Other than the Captain's megaphone and a chair supposedly made from the ship nothing else remains.

Lloyds 16-02-1842

Lloyds carried the wives and families of the advance party from the Whitby and the Will Watch. The joy of their arrival was sobered by the news that 65 children had died during the voyage. Of the 56 families on board, 16 lost all of their children. Only two passengers were classed as adult males. Cases of whooping cough were allowed to board, and the disease spread quickly. Food and medication were inadequate for the large number of children. Captain William Green and his crew slept with some of the women migrants. The surgeon was incompetent. On arrival Arthur Wakefield wrote scathing reports of their conduct which tightened sailing instructions for future migrant ships.

LORD AUCKLAND 27-02-1842

The Lord Auckland also made four voyages to Hobart, Tasmania, in 1844, 1846 and 1853 with convicts. On the voyage to Nelson the ship had on board 171 passengers, 42 crew, 18 sheep, 18 pigs, numerous geese, ducks and chickens for food and 95 tons of fresh water. Passengers included successful merchant Alfred Fell; surveyors Thompson and Barnicoat who surveyed the Waimea Plains and Moutere Hills. Barnicoat settled near Richmond and became a Provincial and Legislative Councillor. Charles Harley, a carpenter, built a hotel and established Nelson Breweries. Two descendants served as mayors of Nelson.

Martha Ridgeway 02-04-1842

Although there were 21 deaths and seven births on the five-month voyage passengers regarded it as a good journey and commended the Captain for his care and consideration. The Martha Ridgeway's arrival triggered the first distribution of "town acres" in the newly-surveyed settlement.

LONDON 10-04-1842

On the 13th August, 1840, the barque London sailed from the Port of London bound for Port Nicholson with 228 emigrants aboard. She arrived on the 12th December, 1840. There had been four infant deaths during the voyage and six new births. The ship's surgeon, Joseph Wilson, clearly came to stay. He brought his wife and six children with him. A carpenter, David Goodall and his son built "Sunnyside" in Brougham St which was later extended to become "Warwick House".

Clifford 11-05-1842

Edward Baigent who founded a saw-milling dynasty, cut his first timber in the Brook Valley. It was carried by hand to John Waring Saxton's cottage in Brook St. Baigent later moved to Wakefield, and Saxton developed his Stoke farm at the head of Saxtons Road. The homestead "Oaklands" is still occupied by his descendants.

Thomas Harrison 25-10-1842

The vessel's surgeon, Thomas Renwick, was an early member of the Nelson Provincial Council, a trustee of the Nelson School Society and of the first Presbyterian Church. He took up land in Marlborough and gave the land for the settlement named after him "Renwicktown". Nelson Provincial Museum created an exhibition about Appo Hocton in 2009 and a published book on the history is available at the front counter.

BOMBAY 14·12·1842

This voyage is notable for one of the first blood transfusions performed at sea. A passenger, Charlotte Cooke, was very weak after childbirth. Dr Samuel Hodgkinson accomplished the transfusion from a healthy male passenger, using very basic equipment. Both mother and baby survived to land in Nelson. There were 6 deaths and 3 births on board.

INDUS 05-02-1843

Cabin passenger John Spooner designed Fort Arthur on Church Hill, built between July and October 1843 as a refuge from expected Maori attack following the Wairau Massacre. It had a 12-foot deep outer trench and drawbridge, an inner trench and 8-foot stockade with towers and loopholes for muskets and 6 cannon. Spooner Range bears his name.

ST PAULI 14-06-1843

This ship brought German settlers including four Lutheran missionaries. The company agent, Johann Beit, was ruthless, cutting rations, imposing fines, creating an unhappy ship. After difficult early times, those who stayed took British citizenship and became valued settlers in the Waimeas and Moutere Hills.

SLAINS CASTLE 26-01-1845

On board this barque was probably the first flax machinery to come to New Zealand, together with the men to set it up and use it. A Durham cow and bull calf, a Cheviot and two Merino rams, a Cheviot ewe, a hive of bees and several cases of plants and fruit trees were all unloaded at Nelson along with a 15 ton iron punt to be used for moving all manner of equipment up the rivers.

Lyne, Elizabeth, 11, cousins of the above

Ralph Bernal 03.12.1847

Chartered by the NZ Company to take immigrants to New Zealand in 1846 and 1847 she then sailed for London but was caught in a storm and put back leaking badly for repairs at Nelson before continuing her voyage. A model of the ship is in Brayshaw Park Museum, Blenheim. It was made by the ship's carpenter for the first officer on the 1848 voyage and is thought to be the oldest model sailing ship in New Zealand.

Kelso 27·10·1849

The Kelso brought several notable families. Mary and Francis Carkeek were the mother and sister of Stephen, who was the first Nelson Customs Collector. Unfortunately Mary died soon after her arrival. Also on the Kelso was Charles Parker, his wife Hannah and their 6 children. They settled in Motueka, had 5 more children and Charles became very involved in local government with liberal views on education, transport and communication.

Berkshire 01-02-1850

The barque Berkshire ran onto the rocks in 1850, the tide had turned and as she passed Fifeshire Rock the wind fell, she drifted onto the rock and when the tide fell she had two thirds of her keel out of the water, only the stern being in the water. By taking off cargo to lighten her she was refloated on the next high tide and brought into the harbour the next day.

LADY NUGENT

07-05-1850

The ship Lady Nugent brought 77 immigrants in 1850. One of the passengers came to erect a steam powered saw mill, flour mill and threshing machine, which were on the ship along with the men to run them. Another man, Mr Tollemache, was the owner of 37 allotments of land in Nelson and had other properties in other settlements. As with many other arrivals, the Lady Nugent added to the McRae family who had arrived on the Mary Anne. William and Sarah were from Ireland and joined his brother George in farming in the Wakefield area. They went on to own large areas of land in North Canterbury. Also on board, Mr and Mrs Robert Godley went on to help settle the new province and make their home in Canterbury .
